

THREE KILLED IN AIRPLANE WRECK

HOOVEN AND ALLISON CO. IS RE-ORGANIZED

J. D. STEELE RESIGNS; GEO. LITTLE NEW HEAD OF XENIA CORPORATION

Mr. Steele Retires From Active Charge To Be Chairman Of Board—W. Crawford Craig Is General Manager—J. F. Orr, Secretary.

J. D. Steele, president and general manager of The Hooven and Allison Co., manufacturers of rope and cordage, tendered his resignation of both offices to the board of directors at their annual organization meeting late Monday afternoon at the company offices in the Steele Bldg.

George Little, who has been vice president of the company since 1922, was immediately elected president and Mrs. A. G. H. Baker, member of the board of directors, was elected vice president to succeed Mr. Little. W. Crawford Craig, who has been secretary and treasurer of the company, was elected general manager and will retain the office of treasurer while J. F. Orr, manager of the North Kansas City, Mo., branch factory, was elected secretary.

Mr. Steele, who retires from active management after a connection of forty years with the company, being one of the founders of the company, was elected chairman of the board of directors, a newly created position, which will enable him to retain an active interest in the affairs of the corporation. In addition to his forty years connection with the company, Mr. Steele has been general manager in complete charge for twenty-five years and was president of the company fifteen years, succeeding the late J. H. Harbison to that position in 1913.

Mr. Little, new president of the company, is the son of the late John Little, who as an original director of the company, played a large part in establishing the company on the sound basis which it has always enjoyed. The new president is a banker and paper manufacturer, having extensive paper interests that have made him a prominent figure in this industry. Friends of the Hooven and Allison Co. believe he will bring to that concern business acumen that will be invaluable in guiding the affairs of the corporation.

Mr. Craig came to the company a number of years ago as auditor, and his ability and personal popularity have been recognized.

NO SEDATIVES WILL HELP SNYDER, GRAY ON MARCH TO DEATH

Both Serene While Awaiting Death—Bill Is Delayed

SING SING PRISON, OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray will not be given sedatives or "dope" of any kind to quiet their nerves just before they start on their tragic march to the death chair on Thursday night, Dr. C. C. Sweet, Sing Sing physician, said in an interview today.

"We never do it and will not in their cases," Dr. Sweet declared emphatically.

He said there was no truth in reports that the condemned couple are on the verge of collapse.

Dr. Sweet said it was "hard to say" how Mrs. Snyder would act when she is notified that her time has come to die. Gray, he predicted, "probably will go like nearly all condemned persons—bravely."

Dr. Sweet said that electrocution has become such a scientific procedure that no longer is the head, body or legs of the victim burned in contact with the electrodes when the current is turned on. A desperate serenity has come over both Mrs. Snyder and Gray, according to other attaches of Sing Sing. Mrs. Snyder had almost ceased to have emotional seizures and Gray is deadly calm. Mrs. Snyder talked at length with her mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown, and even went so far as to discuss her funeral arrangements.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 10.—So as not to embarrass Governor Smith in deciding the clemency appeal of Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, Assemblyman Christopher C. McGrath's bill to abolish capital punishment will not be introduced in the legislature until after Thursday, the date of the Snyder-Gray execution.

"I expect to introduce my anti-capital punishment bill later in the week," McGrath said today.

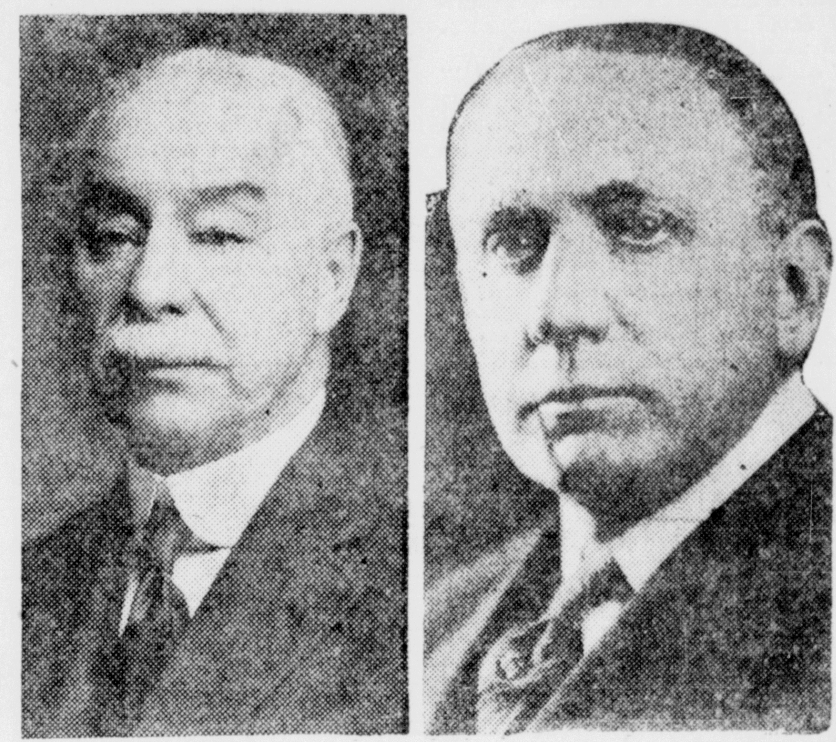

BOTH PARTIES HAVE EMPTY WAR CHESTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Both the Republican and Democratic national committees will enter upon a presidential campaign year with empty war chests.

The Republican national committee today reported to the clerk of the house that it spent $10,930.43 more than it collected during 1927. The Democratic committee previously had reported a deficit of $23,000.

The G. O. P. committee report showed total expenses during the past year to be $123,136.43 with contributions of $113,106.00.

XENIA INDUSTRY HAS NEW HEAD

J. D. STEELE resigned as president and general manager of the Hooven and Allison Co., and was elected chairman of the board of directors late Monday afternoon.

FIRST FLIGHT OVER TASMAN SEA MADE BY NEW ZEALANDERS

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Using a machine similar to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's famous "Spirit of St. Louis," Capt. Hood and Lieut. Moncrieff, airmen of New Zealand, have flown over the Tasman Sea for the first time in history, said a Central News dispatch from Wellington, New Zealand, this afternoon.

Capt. Hood and Lieut. Moncrieff hopped off at Sydney late yesterday to make a 1400-mile flight to Wellington. When they became three hours overdue fears were felt for their safety. The flight had been undertaken against the advice of Premier Bruce, who said he believed the machine unsuitable.

The Central News dispatch, which was received here at 12:10 p. m., said that the airmen had been sighted fifty miles from Wellington lying strong.

TWELVE HUNDRED MARINES SENT TO HELP NICARAGUA FORCES

United States Strength Practically Doubled—Believe Liberals Aiding Sandino In Revolt Movement

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Twelve hundred additional U. S. marines were enroute to Nicaragua today to reinforce the occupational troops and enable the marine command to pursue a more vigorous campaign to "get" Sandino, the rebel leader.

The fresh draft will practically double the United States land forces in the republic. Simultaneously with the departure of the marines, headed by Maj. Gen. John A. LeJeune, commandant of marines, Alejandro Cesar, Nicaraguan minister in Washington, charged that prominent Liberals in his country are secretly aiding Sandino's cause.

Cesar is a member of the conservative party, which won the support of the state department in the recent Conservative-Liberal civil war. Col. Henry L. Stimson, as a peace envoy representing President Coolidge, persuaded the Liberals to lay down their arms and enter upon a truce with the Conservatives. "The Liberals in Nicaragua," said Cesar, "must be assisting Gen. Sandino as it would be difficult otherwise to explain the extent and gravity of his movement."

He declared that the attacks on Americans had all occurred in provinces under Liberal control.

MANAGUA, Jan. 10.—General Sandino's sharpshooters present a constant menace to marine flyers keeping open communications between Managua and the advance guard of the marine forces drawn up against Sandino's men in the Quilali region.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10.—When the Canadian liner "Empress of France" leaves New York January 24 for a winter cruise to South America and South Africa she will carry in her hold an assortment of gifts ranging from a package of gramophone needles to a keg of linseed oil soap, with almost every conceivable item of human apparel and food included in a bizarre consignment of gifts from Montrealers to the 140 inhabitants of Tristan de Gunha, the world's smallest autonomous nation, an island of Britain in the middle of the South Atlantic.

Appeals for gifts to the only settlers were made through the Canadian Pacific and the Daughters of the Empire and resulted in the receipt of many gifts.

Without regular shipping connection with the outside world since the days of the Windjammer, the natives of Tristan de Gunha will put off from shore on rafts when the "Empress" slackens speed off the island late in February, to receive their presents from civilization. The island colony was founded in 1817 when a corporal of royal artillery garrisoning the fort and his battery sailed away. Several other men and women arrived later and by the "normal increases in population" have brought the total to 140 inhabitants in one hundred and ten years.

SHIP BEARS GIFTS TO ISLAND FOLKS

STATE INSPECTORS ATTEMPT TO SETTLE BLAME IN DISASTER

Miracle Prevented More Deaths As 628 Were In Shaft

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Jan. 10.—The state of Illinois started today to determine the cause of the explosion in the lower levels of Industrial Mine No. 18, one of the Peabody Coal Company properties, in which twenty-one men died yesterday.

A. D. Lewis, of Springfield, state director of mines and minerals, with six inspectors, was on the ground since last night and at 9 o'clock today went under ground. They planned to inspect every foot of the explosion area.

"We will attempt to fix this blame, if any blame there is, and to formulate recommendations which will block a recurrence of this or similar disasters," Mr. Lewis said, as he prepared to go down the shaft up which the bodies of the twenty-one victims had been brought.

The revised and checked list of dead, as on file at the mine offices and headquarters of the miners union here, was as follows:

Carl Jones, David McPhail, Walter Graves, Ed Dodd, Aubra Stone, C. M. Dugger, Albert Jones, Keny Lawrence, George Carter, George Mahler, B. Tanner, Neely, Paul Kays, Ray Farrell, John Mitchell, Gerald Day, Lloyd Bradley, Orval Simons, and C. P. Caraway.

A careful checkup of mine officials that lasted through the night showed that only a miracle kept the fatality list as low as the check showed.

There were 628 men below ground when the explosion shook the subterranean passages.

How it happened that only twenty-four were overcome, is the point of wonder. The cause of the explosion remains a mystery. Mine officials on duty below, declared that none of the electric machines were in use at the time of the explosion, as shifts were changing and the power was shut off temporarily, to expedite handling of the cages. They are inclined to the belief that a match or a cigarette smoked surreptitiously in a darkened corner of one of the drifts, furnished the fatal spark to the accumulation of mine gases.

POPE PRAISES PLAN OF CHURCH-UNION

ROME, Jan. 10.—The Pope today issued an unexpected encyclical on the question of the union of the churches and recognized the praiseworthy mixing of the movement with politics.

The encyclical apparently has been prompted by the recent political discussions in Great Britain over the new Church of England prayer-book, which has revived the movement there for a union of the branches of the Church of England and the Catholic Church.

KILLS WIFE, SELF

CLEVELAND, Jan. 10.—Believed to have become despondent because he had been out of work, William Vichweg, 60, shot and killed his wife, Barbara, 57, then turned the gun upon himself, here today.

A daughter found the bodies fully clothed, in the dining room of the Viehweg home this morning.

AMERICAN WHO ESCAPED FROM MEXICAN IS HELPING SEARCH

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 10.—Rested a bit after his harrowing escape from a band of Mexican bandits, during which he killed four of his captors, Lyman F. Barber, Los Angeles mining engineer, today was aiding the Mexican government to trace and round up the band who held him captive for three weeks.

The bandits raised the ransom figures for Barber's release three times. Mrs. Barber, who paid two of the ransom demands, is caring for her husband and seeing that he does not exert himself too soon after his terrible experience.

When Barber reached here by train, he was barefooted, ragged, and almost completely exhausted by his thrilling night battle with the bandits and his subsequent journey afoot over rough mountainous country to Cuernavaca.

Barber's story of how he escaped is a graphic tale of a captive made desperate by the realization that his life meant nothing to the cruel men holding him.

WILL WED FOSTER FATHER

Girl Adopted By Wealthy Oil Man To Become His Wife

Miss Lyde Roberts Marland and her foster father, E. W. Marland.

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch To The Gazette

PONCA CITY, Okla., Jan. 10.—Oklahoma's newest romance soon will culminate in the marriage of E. W. Marland, president of the Marland Oil Co., to his adopted daughter, Lyde Roberts Marland. She is 25. He is 54.

Since 1912 the girl has made her home with the Marlands. Mrs. Marland was a sister of the real mother of Lyde Roberts Marland, Mrs. F. Roberts. In 1914, she and her brother, George Roberts, were adopted by the Marlands.

Money and kindness were lavished on the brother and sister and everything possible was done to make them happy. George became an associate in his foster father's oil company, and Lyde, after attending school in the east and traveling extensively, became widely known in Ponca City social circles.

Nearly two years ago Mrs. Marland died, mourned by the children she had adopted as if she had been their own mother.

It was just a few months ago that a romance developed between Marland and his foster daughter. Philadelphia, home of the future Mrs. Marland's real parents, has been chosen as the scene of the wedding. After the ceremony, the couple will return to a new $200,000 home at Ponca City. Gardens, golf courses, a game reserve, polo field and thoroughbred stables go to make it one of the finest estates in the west.

Marland has amassed millions from petroleum and has gained wide recognition as a philanthropist, often giving personal as well as financial aid to unfortunate.

He is known, also, as the "daddy" of polo in Oklahoma. Many tournaments have been held on his estate.

WINCHESTER, Ky., Jan. 10.—Responsibility for the brutal murder of his three-year-old daughter is placed on his housekeeper by R. H. Hitts, 35, of Greenup, Ky., in a signed statement which he calls a "confession," made public today.

Hitts and the housekeeper, Mrs. Marie Prazier, 20, have been held in the county jail here since last Thursday when mob violence was threatened in Greenup. Hitts gave his rambling statement to Assistant Jailer J. J. Hammond late yesterday.

He declares that the Prazier woman killed the child while he was working on his farm. He accuses her of shocking brutality. The woman has thus far declined to say anything.

Hitts and his wife have been separated and he had custody of their daughter, Mary Magdalena, aged three. The housekeeper, he says, disliked the child and frequently threatened to kill her. In one part of his statement Hitts declares that his housekeeper "did brutally whip Mary Hitts and rub her back with salt and turpentine."

The child's body, disfigured and battered, was discovered by authorities about ten days ago.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 10.—Lieut. Alvin W. Smith, Washington, D. C., airways extension superintendent of the department of commerce, was scheduled to fly over the new Cleveland-Buffalo air route today to select sites for intermediate field and beacons.

The government plan calls for fields 2,000 feet square, Smith said.

DISCOVER MISSING AVIATORS 36 HOURS AFTER PLANE CRASH

Believe Ship Fell During Heavy Fog On Sunday

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Missing for thirty-six hours, a wrecked airplane in which three fliers went to their death was found early today in a field near Fonda.

The dead:

Captain Edward M. Pauley of Albany.

Lieut. George R. Benedict, a Curtiss field flier.

Pilot Raymond Henries of Buffalo.

The plane, enroute from Mineola to Buffalo, is believed to have crashed to earth in a heavy fog late Sunday afternoon. The fliers left Albany Sunday afternoon, and had not been heard from until their bodies were found in the wrecked plane early today.

Alarmed when the plane did not reach Buffalo Sunday night, officials of that city wired Albany aviation authorities asking that a search be started at once for the missing aircraft.

News of the mysterious disappearance of the plane was broadcast by radio yesterday. Within an hour after the news had been put on the air, officials received a telephone message from a resident of Glen, Montgomery County, stating that he had heard the drone of an airplane motor late Sunday afternoon, and that a few minutes later he heard what he believed was a crash.

Working with this information, Montgomery County authorities aided by state police and a group of civilians early today started a search in the vicinity of Glen.

Completely wrecked, the plane finally was found in a clump of bushes in a field between Fonda and Glen. All three fliers are believed to have been instantly killed when their plane crashed.

"LAME DUCKS" WILL BE ELIMINATED BY PROPOSED CHANGE

Amendment Would Change Times For Taking Office

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—After a five-year struggle, backers of a constitutional amendment to abolish "lame duck" sessions of congress and change the date of the presidential inauguration appeared today to have won their right to bring the question to a vote in the house.

The measure will go on the calendar within the next two days as the result of a favorable report of the house committee on election of president, and will be subject to consideration under the call of the committee.

The proposed amendment, embodied in the Norris resolution in the senate and the White resolution in the house, has passed the senate four times and has been favorably reported by a house committee on three previous occasions.

The White resolution would change the date of presidential inaugurations from March 4 to January 2, and would have congress convene on January 4 instead of the first Monday in December. The Norris resolution differs slightly as to dates.

The effect would be to have members of congress enter on their duties within two months after election in November and the president would take office within three months of his election.

Under the present system, members of congress who are elected in November to take office the next March, do not actually reach the floor of congress until the next December, or thirteen months after election.

MANY WITNESSES TO TELL OF DISASTER

CHARLESTOWN NAVY YARD, Boston, Mass., Jan. 10.—A file of witnesses, from enlisted men to admirals, were scheduled to take the witness stand today at the naval court of inquiry investigating the submarine S-4 disaster.

The members of the crew of the coast guard cutter Paulding, which collided with the submarine in Provincetown Harbor, will testify further as to the crash. These witnesses, on watch at the time of the tragedy, include Charles E. Reed, quartermaster, James C. Milazzo, seaman, Walter C. Rheingans, seaman, and W. W. Patten, radio man.

Rear Admiral Phillip Andrews, commandant of the first naval district, will tell of the Charlestown Navy Yard's part in the navy operations.

Lieut. C. J. Flotte, of the Navy medical corps, also is expected to be called to tell of the estimated time its forty victims of the S-4 clung to life.

The White resolution would change the date of presidential inaugurations from March 4 to January 2, and would have congress convene on January 4 instead of the first Monday in December. The Norris resolution differs slightly as to dates.

The effect would be to have members of congress enter on their duties within two months after election in November and the president would take office within three months of his election.

Under the present system, members of congress who are elected in November to take office the next March, do not actually reach the floor of congress until the next December, or thirteen months after election.

CHAPTER LVIII

If Mrs. Cyrus Lexington had been told that her daughter, Lily, could claw at another woman and shake her and scream at her like a fishwife, she never would have believed it.

She would have said "Impossible!" Hadn't she brought Lily up to be a lady? Hadn't she sent her to the very best day school? Hadn't she been taught to be polite and well bred? She certainly had!

And if anyone had told Staley Drummond that the lovely, flower-like girl he was going to marry just as soon as she was free from her unfortunate marriage, could behave as Lily was behaving, he would not have believed it, either.

Lily, herself, could scarcely believe that she was doing what she was doing—shaking the Ertz until her teeth fairly rattled, and shrieking at her to let Pat alone or she'd know the reason why!

This is a terrible thing to do, she thought, way down deep in her mind, under the rage and the heat that were shaking her just as she was shaking the little nurse.

And then, in the midst of her fury, she felt Pat's hands on her, and his touch was like magic instantly all the anger and madness went out of her and she turned to him and buried her face against his chest. She stayed there, trembling and sobbing, clinging to him until he pushed her very gently away from him.

She saw then that Sadie and Roy Jetterson had come into the hall by way of the dining room, and were standing in the doorway, taking in the scene with wide-open eyes, as they might have taken in an exciting motion picture. Sadie was chewing something that she had in her mouth and there was grease on her chin. Sadie always "tasted" what she was cooking.

Pat's eyes went from her to him, and then back to her and Elizabeth Ertz. "Have you lost your mind, Lily?" he asked. "You'd no right to touch her. She's never done a thing to you."

The nurse had not said a word, but she was breathing hard, as if she had been running a race, and for once her hair was rough and tangled where Lily had shaken it loose from its pins. Her white uniform was rumpled, and from it came a faint smell that was like the odor of the hospitals, where she spent so much of her time.

Lily giggled through her tears. "How can you like a girl who uses aniseptics for perfume?" she asked, looking up at Pat with her lovely eyes wide and wet, but crinkled with laughter at the corners.

Pat's lips tightened and his face became more white and grim than it had been a second before. "Let's not talk all this over right now," he said quietly, and then he turned to Roy so that Lily had a swift look at his profile. It seemed more sharply etched than it had been eight or nine weeks ago. He was thinner, and he looked older, somehow, in spite of his youth and his rugged health and his vitality and "pop."

"Roy, could I borrow your car to run Lily home?" he asked, and without a word, Roy nodded.

Beside him, Sadie, in her bunghole apron, and holding a yellow mixing bowl and spoon to her ample bosom, looked Lily up and down with great disfavor in her eyes. She seemed to want Lily to know how thoroughly she disliked her at that moment.

"Never had a scene like that in my house before," Lily heard her say to The Ertz as she followed Pat out of the house into the early spring darkness.

Sadie's automobile was standing in front of the house—the one that Roy had bought for her in the days when the La France piston rings had looked like a sure-fire success to him and Pat.

"Don't you take her home in my car!" Sadie called softly from the doorway, as the two went down the steps. "That woman can't ride in my car, Pat!"

Behind it a few feet stood Roy's own car, and as Pat started down the sidewalk towards it, Lily pulled him back. "I won't ride in either of their cars," she declared. "You take me to a drug store or some place where I can telephone Staley. He'll come and get me."

She said that to hurt Pat. But if it did hurt him, he gave no sign of it. "All right," he answered indifferently, and swung around on his heel. "Come along," he said in silence they walked down to the corner where a red vase and a blue vase stood out from a drug store window.

"Pat, I really came to let you know how sorry I am about the picture ring flopping. Lily said, when they were near the corner 'I am sorry—terribly, terribly sorry.'"

He did not answer, he seemed to have nothing to say to her, this man who had once cared for a very old person in the whole wide world, but her. He just walked along as if she had not spoken.

"You're not very polite, are you?" Lily asked, absolutely forgetting how extremely impolite, not to say disgraceful, she herself had just been in the Jettersons' house.

All she remembered—all she wanted to remember—all that scene—the way Elizabeth Ertz had taken hold of Pat's arm, as if he were her special property. She ground her small, even teeth as she thought of it.

"Pat, ARE you crazy about that Ertz?" she asked. "You know, Pat, we once loved each other more than I great deal. I love you more than I ever shall love anybody again—and it makes me wildly jealous to think of her daring to lay her hand on your arm like that—"

Then Pat did answer her. "You're what people call 'a dog in the manger,' if you'll excuse me for saying such a thing to you," he said, in a flat, level tone. "You don't want anyone else to have me. You want to go through with this divorce and marry Drummond, and then have the satisfaction of knowing that I'm still unhappy about you. You want me to promise not to see Elizabeth again, don't you?"

That was exactly what Lily would have liked to have him promise. But she was ashamed to confess it, so she just tossed her head and ran ahead of him into the drug store.

He stood outside the booth while she telephoned Staley and asked him to come for her.

Then she went out into the small, cluttered, brightly-lighted store, where she had always traded when she was a housewife in this ordinary neighborhood of nice, pleasant ordinary folks.

The druggist spoke pleasantly to her now, and then glanced sharply from her to Pat. Evidently he had heard bits of the gossip about them.

"Don't wait with me," Lily said to Pat, wishing that she had telephoned for a cab instead of for a Staley. For one thing, she was not eager to see him that night, and for another, she did not want him to find Pat here with her when he arrived in his car. He would wonder what she had come to see Pat for, and she would not know what to tell him. "Go back to your Ertz and your wonderful Jettersons. I'll sit here and read a movie magazine."

But, although she bought one and climbed up on a high stool and pretended to read it, he did not stir. "I'll stay here until you're safe in the car," he said stubbornly, and stay he did.

"Please don't let Staley see you!" She had to plead with him at last. "He'll wonder what on earth I came to see you for—and I don't want him to know that I did see you."

Pat looked at her with solemn blue eyes. "Listen to me," he said. "Why don't you be straight with this man? Why don't you tell him you came down here to tell me you were sorry about the piston ring being a failure? Not that it was a failure, exactly. But it wasn't as better than the one his company have, and they have the money to advertise theirs. To push it—and Roy and I haven't. We bit off more than we could chew, that's all."

"All right—anyway," Lily begged. "I don't want him to be angry with me—and if you're out of sight I can think of some yarn to tell him."

Pat gave her a still deeper look. He seemed to be looking way into the depths of her heart and her soul. "You just don't know how to tell the truth, do you?" he asked. "I wonder if you ever will."

And then he turned away from her and went out of the little bright, untidy store and down the street. Lily could hear him whistling Sue's favorite piece, "Blue Heaven," as he went.

She stood at the door, watching for Staley, and thinking how she would have liked to follow Pat into the darkness.

"He's going back to The Ertz," she told herself, wretchedly. "He's in love with her now, and so he hates me."

On a warm March day, some three weeks later, a plain, cheap little white envelope with her name written across it in very beautiful handwriting, came to Lily in the morning's mail.

The writing had a familiar look, and suddenly she remembered where she had seen it before—on the grocery slips from Mrs. France's grocery store. It was Pat's mother's writing.

The letter within had no heading. It started right off with a sentence that went straight to the point.

"Pat is getting ready to give up his flat, and there are two or three things of yours in it. A pale-pink chiffon slip, a lavender silk cushion, and a box of things that you used to make up your face with. Also a flask and a silver cigarette box. I suppose the cigarette box is yours. I cannot imagine a woman owning a whisky flask, but if it is yours, please let me know. And please come after the things."

It was signed simply "Mrs. France."

Lily leaned back in her chair and blew a long plume of cigarette smoke at the ceiling. Both the flask and the cigarette case belonged to her. They had belonged to Staley Drummond and he had given them to her on one of their secret lunch parties.

She remembered that his initials were on them, too, and that she had not smoked all of the cigarettes in the case or touched any of the liquor in the flask.

She had seen them when he took them out of his pocket one day at the Park Lane restaurant, and had admired them. "The case is too small for a man's case," Staley had told her, and pushed them across the table to her. "Keep them both—I like to think that you have something of mine."

While she was thinking about him the telephone rang, and running to answer it, she found him waiting for her on the wire. It was a marvelous day for a drive, he said, and he was going to take the whole day off and get out into the country if a certain beautiful young lady would go with him. He had something to show her, he added. "Something I had made for you," he said, and Lily, always thrilled at the thought of getting some new piece of jewelry from him, fairly thrilled as she answered that she would adore to spend the day in the country—which was certainly not her idea of the place to spend any time at all ever. She hated the country. Especially at this time of the year, when it was all mud and bare wet bushes.

"I hope you're not planning a picnic anywhere," she greeted Staley, when he came driving up to the house in his open car a half hour later, "because the ground is too wet and cold to sit on—or even to stand on while we boil steaks and make coffee and things." She knew that was Staley's favorite form of picnic—the kind where he could cook a lot of food over a smoky fire.

"All right, we'll find a tavern, then, or something," he agreed, and as he leaned forward to start his motor he slipped a box into her hand. Within was the most beautiful sapphire and diamond bracelet she had ever seen.

"And you designed it, I know!" she cried, looking at him with eyes that shone like the jewels. "Oh, you darling!" Really, he was wonderful, she said to herself, slipping it over her gloved hand. He was always thinking of her. Always thinking of ways to spend money on her. And the best of it was that he had so much of it to spend!

And so it happened that it was not until the next day that Lily remembered Mrs. France's note again.

She remembered it late in the morning, when she was making the bed in her room, and she did not get dressed to go down to the Derbyshire St. flat until after lunch.

With her heart beating wildly, she ran up the steps. Pat might be there! She might see him. She tapped lightly on the door, and waited for it to be opened.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging.

Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

admired them. "The case is too small for a man's case," Staley had told her, and pushed them across the table to her. "Keep them both—I like to think that you have something of mine."

While she was thinking about him the telephone rang, and running to answer it, she found him waiting for her on the wire. It was a marvelous day for a drive, he said, and he was going to take the whole day off and get out into the country if a certain beautiful young lady would go with him. He had something to show her, he added.

"Something I had made for you," he said, and Lily, always thrilled at the thought of getting some new piece of jewelry from him, fairly thrilled as she answered that she would adore to spend the day in the country—which was certainly not her idea of the place to spend any time at all ever. She hated the country. Especially at this time of the year, when it was all mud and bare wet bushes.

"I hope you're not planning a picnic anywhere," she greeted Staley, when he came driving up to the house in his open car a half hour later, "because the ground is too wet and cold to sit on—or even to stand on while we boil steaks and make coffee and things." She knew that that was Staley's favorite form of picnic—the kind where he could cook a lot of food over a smoky fire.

"All right, we'll find a tavern, then, or something," he agreed, and as he leaned forward to start his motor he slipped a box into her hand. Within was the most beautiful sapphire and diamond bracelet she had ever seen.

"And you designed it, I know!" she cried, looking at him with eyes that shone like the jewels. "Oh, you darling!" Really, she was wonderful, she said to herself, slipping it over her gloved hand. He was always thinking of her. Always thinking of ways to spend money on her. And the best of it was that he had so much of it to spend!

And so it happened that it was

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging.

Best of all, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

GREENE COUNTY HOME COMING IS PLANNED; ZELL IS CHAIRMAN

The "ball was started rolling" for the Greene County Home-Coming planned for next fall, at the meeting of joint committees from the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, Monday. Postmaster C. S. Frazer, general chairman, with Dr. B. R. McClellan and Frank L. Smith, representing the Rotary Club, and Dr. A. M. Patterson and M. L. Wolf, representing the Kiwanis Club, met in Mr. Frazer's office to lay the foundation for the celebration.

City Auditor T. H. Zell was elected general chairman by the committee and accepted the responsibility. Mr. Zell and Edwin Gallo-way, other members of the joint committee, were unable to attend the meeting in Mr. Frazer's office.

The 1928 Home-Coming will mark the 125th anniversary of Greene County and will be held twenty years after the first home-coming, held in 1908. The idea for the 1928 celebration had its birth at a joint meeting of Xenia Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs here a few months ago, when Russell Greiner, Kansas City, Mo., former Xenian, suggested the idea. The committees representing the two clubs were appointed at that time, but were unable to meet and formulate plans until after the holidays.

J. F. Orr, Kansas City, general chairman of the 1908 Home-Coming, was also present at Monday's meeting and gave valuable assistance in the tentative plans. Dr. Patterson and Mr. Wolf served with Mr. Orr in 1908.

Mr. Zell will be given a free hand in the formulation of plans for the event. The date is tentatively set for next fall. The 1908 affair being held the last two days of August and September 1. Since the seventy-fifth anniversary of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, will also be celebrated this year, it is possible that the educational institution will join in the celebration.

The addresses of former Xenians will be obtained and they will be notified of the date and plans. Enthusiasm is widespread in the plans and Mr. Zell is planning the immediate appointment of committee chairmen and members.

EMPLOYEES BECOME ILL AFTER EATING CAFETERIA PIES

After eating pies served in the Wilbur Wright Field cafeteria Monday at luncheon, scores of civilian employees of the post were made severely ill, it was reported.

Immediate treatment was given those stricken and all are thought out of danger. An investigation was launched immediately, in an effort to determine the cause of the general illness.

Several employees of the field, including stenographers and typists were taken violently ill soon after luncheon, served at 11:30 o'clock. They were taken to the post hospital, and it was found the food was responsible.

Representatives of the commandant's office were sent through all branches, ordering all persons who had eaten pie at lunch to the hospital for treatment. It was believed that foreign substances in the flour used in the pies was responsible.

A chemical analysis of all ingredients used in the pies will be made.

GREENE COUNTY HOME COMING IS PLANNED; ZELL IS CHAIRMAN

The "ball was started rolling" for the Greene County Home-Coming planned for next fall, at the meeting of joint committees from the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, Monday. Postmaster C. S. Frazer, general chairman, with Dr. B. R. McClellan and Frank L. Smith, representing the Rotary Club, and Dr. A. M. Patterson and M. L. Wolf, representing the Kiwanis Club, met in Mr. Frazer's office to lay the foundation for the celebration.

City Auditor T. H. Zell was elected general chairman by the committee and accepted the responsibility. Mr. Zell and Edwin Gallo-way, other members of the joint committee, were unable to attend the meeting in Mr. Frazer's office.

The 125th anniversary of Greene County and will be held twenty years after the first home-coming, held in 1908. The idea for the 1928 celebration had its birth at a joint meeting of Xenia Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs here a few months ago, when Russell Greiner, Kansas City, Mo., former Xenian, suggested the idea. The committees representing the two clubs were appointed at that time, but were unable to meet and formulate plans until after the holidays.

J. F. Orr, Kansas City, general chairman of the 1908 Home-Coming, was also present at Monday's meeting and gave valuable assistance in the tentative plans. Dr. Patterson and Mr. Wolf served with Mr. Orr in 1908.

Mr. Zell will be given a free hand in the formulation of plans for the event. The date is tentatively set for next fall, the 1908 affair being held the last two days of August and September 1. Since the seventy-fifth anniversary of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, will also be celebrated this year, it is possible that the educational institution will have a dual six-cylinder, 250-horse power motor, Westinghouse air brakes, and having a gasoline capacity of 300 gallons.

The train was built by the Brill Electric Co., and brought to Dayton by E. L. Fields, company representative, who will remain with it until B. and O. employees become accustomed to its operation.

M. J. Hoban, Dayton, road foreman of engines on the Dayton-Chillicothe division, accompanied the train on its initial trip.

Two units compose the new train. The first, numbered 6038, contains the plant and motor and a combination smoker and passenger coach. It bears every resemblance to a traction car.

The trailer is a combination baggage and mail car.

Having modern conveniences, the gas-electric train is the first of its type to make its appearance in this district.

Similar trains, however, are employed by fifty of the foremost railroads of the United States and the B. and O. system uses this type extensively in the East.

GAS-ELECTRIC TRAIN USED ON B. AND O. THROUGH XENIA NOW

A modern gas-electric train, which replaces the old steam locomotive on the Dayton-Chillicothe division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, made its maiden trip Tuesday morning, passing through Xenia on the way to Chillicothe at 8:22 o'clock.

A brief stop was made here. The train was scheduled to pass through this city again on the return trip about 5:30 p. m. Tuesday. Daily trips are to be made as usual between the two points. Xenia furnished one passenger for the first trip.

Two veteran railroad employees, George Swiers, engineer, and P. J. Sweeney, conductor, who have been in charge of the 7-40 out of Dayton for many years, are pilots of the new conveyer.

Although the gas-electric train writes a new chapter in the history of transportation in the Miami Valley, many mourn the disappearance of the faithful old steam locomotive, a victim of progress.

KILLING OF CRIMINALS

The problem as to whether a person guilty of murder should be put to death for his crime is causing more and more discussion, many insisting that the state should not take human life. It is contended that one crime cannot be corrected by another one of the same kind.

The chief argument in support of the extreme penalty is that it is a deterrent to crime perhaps preventing other murders.

On the other hand, many convicts would just as soon die as to face a life in prison at hard labor. George Remus demanded either death or freedom, although this demand might have been made because of its dramatic effect rather than in real seriousness.

But after all, isn't a life at hard labor in prison with nothing to look forward to and nothing to think about but a hideous crime committed for which one is paying—isn't such a life an even greater punishment than quick and painless death.

If Hickman, for instance, has the mind of a man, rather than the mind of an animal or a fiend, what could be greater punishment than a life in which he is haunted by the terrible memory of an innocent and beautiful little girl tortured and butchered.

It is not the nature of the punishment that serves as a deterrent to crime. It is the quickness and the sureness of it.

With the final decision as to the fate of a murderer always so far in the distant future killers hesitate but little. What is needed most is a quick and sure conviction for every criminal. Convictions would come quicker if the death penalty should be eliminated. In that case mistakes could be rectified if discovered later.

If a slayer is doomed to a life of mental torment, rather than to quick and easy death, there should be no possible hope of pardon.

NEW MARRIAGE STYLE FIZZLE

The apparent effort of Mr. and Mrs. Haldeman-Julius to set a new style in marriages by widely advertising the 1927 companionate model adopted by their daughter, seems to have fizzled. At least, so far, there has been no wild rush of love-sick maidens and admiring shicks to the marriage license bureau to try the scheme.

A few who feared there might be such a rush now find that most young people have more sense than was generally supposed. The majority of youths and maidens, when they dream of marriage, they dream of a match for "keeps."

And fond parents frown on any match making before the youth involved is financially able to set up a tent and a cook stove or some sort of a habitation.

The dream of a youth to provide a suitable home for the "most beautiful girl in the world" always has been and probably always will be in the greatest possible incentive to hard work and real thrift which make a real man out of a dream-eyed cake eater.

It will be a sad day when everything is all fixed so that a youth can step into a trial marriage any day and then step out again if everything is not as lovely as it might be.

This companionate scheme has provided a lot of publicity for Judge Ben Lindsey, its inventor, and Haldeman-Julius, who staged a demonstration of how it works, but the providing of notoriety seems to be about the only thing for which it is much good.

Now and then a candidate bobs up who can only be described as his own favorite son.—Detroit News.

The Way of the World

GROUPS

Miller, professor of sociology at Ohio State university, says the existence of nations is becoming less important in world society than the unification of groups that cross-sectionalize the world. Organizations like the Rotary club and other associations which claim members from all the civilized nations are playing a great part in the preservation of world peace. Organizations of men and women which reach across national borders are the most important organizations on earth.

YOUR $220

Is your $220 in the savings bank? Equal distribution of the nation's total savings now in banks would give each person in the United States $220. At the middle of this year 26 billion dollars was reported in savings accounts. If you do not make enough to enable you, with your best effort, to make even a small savings, you had better be looking for another job. If you make enough to enable you to make a saving but don't do it through lack of will power and judgment you had better have a serious look at yourself.

THE ONCE-OVER

Owners of chain stores and other concerns which see location at the best corners and depend on volume of sales have trained men to test locations by counting and studying the people who pass a given spot on a crowded street. These observers have to do more than count. They are supposed to know, in the study of a few moments, whether the passerby is the kind that eats lunch at a lunch counter or goes leisurely to the club. He is supposed to be able to tell whether he prospective has money to spend and whether he is likely to spend. That takes trained observation and it's an interesting job.

New Yorker

—By—
BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The dining room of the Hotel Lafayette, at University place and Ninth street, is a true mecca for fat women. Every other patron of the place, the other night, seemed to me to have at least two chins and to beam rubrically as living advertisements for the Lafayette. One especially buxom lady, in a petal pink chiffon frock whose original model probably had been designed for a lissome debutante, had her napkin boldly tucked high in her décolletage, and her dog collar of pearls quivered as she bent passionately over her hors d'oeuvres.

At the Lafayette you can get an appallingly large dinner for $2.50. Of course, the best choice of the menu are not included, but the quality of the food is excellent, swift and efficient. If you want something out of the ordinary, such as venison steak or quail, you must consult the la carte side of the menu. It is a joy in itself to watch the regular patrons as they dip desperately into nine or ten courses, and top off the snack with French pastry and ice cream. The people who worry about the menace of the thin woman should visit this eating place. It would seem, looking over the personnel, that the type was dying out in downtown New York.

Judith Anderson is an actress who has surmounted obstacles in arriving at her present place on Broadway. She is certainly not beautiful and to my way of thinking owns a voice which is monotonously unpleasant. Perhaps it is that in "Behold the Bridegroom," she is hopelessly miscast. Certainly she seemed to me to give the role little of the light and shade it required. She plays in the Kelly piece a sophisticated of twenty-seven, stricken love sick by one glance at a simple hero-man. I was bored to the point of madness by the talkativeness of the play. It was a ponderous and a deadly dissertation, and with the exception of a valuable few minutes in the last act, when a deftly acted scene between John Marston and Thurston Hall gave some sense of reality to the proceedings, I might as well have spent the evening shooting craps. Mr. Kelly, I feel, is a better playwright when he interprets the common people. "The Show Off," with its homely touches, its raking insight into the character of a middle-class oaf, was a triumph in comic realism. But as I listened to his tony characters mouthing what was supposed to be ripe sophistication for the Park avenue table, I felt that the author had wandered out of his proper field.

Henry Boynton tells me that it is an exceedingly easy matter to finance an aviation company nowadays. The other day, he says, a chap came into the office where he works who was representing a new concern that is being organized around one of the transatlantic flyers. He came to see about an instrument for an endurance flight. He said he had bought the site for a flying field and a plant for $900,000 and that raising the money had been extremely easy. Apparently all that is necessary is to get a man who is famous as a pilot in on the proposition and the money flows in.

FRENCH LEAVE

We were invited to the apartment of a French family for dinner, but on arriving there we found the family somewhat upset over the fact that their maid had suddenly, without warning, packed up her clothes that afternoon and set out for the land of whereabouts unknown.

I was at once fascinated. Here, I reflected, was a perfect example of French leave. All my life I had heard of people taking French leave, but now here was the real thing—French leave by a French maid in a French home right in France.

"Is it a common occurrence," I asked, "for French servants to take French leave?"

"Oh, yes," the French hostess replied. "I have heard of it many times. It is a French custom. It is not at all unusual."

"Then the face of our host showed that a great light had dawned. He said, turning to his wife, 'Oh, yes, I have heard of it many times. It is a French custom. It is not at all unusual.'"

How to Achieve Beauty

How to Choose Your Beauty Helps

I have been talking to you the past few weeks about the fundamental laws of beauty—cleanliness, stimulation, etc. Then I told you about the different kinds of beauty and how you should combine them into a perfect ensemble.

This week I want to come down to telling you how to choose the actual beauty helps—the creams, the lotions, etc., that you use to improve your good looks. So few women really know what they are putting on their faces nor why they are doing it. I want to give you a picture of what these beauty agents really are when you take off their wrappings and trimmings.

I wonder how many of you, when you go to a beauty counter, have a preconceived idea of what you want. Something I wish all beauty preparations would be put in plain packages so that the people would never buy them for their pretty boxes or attractive jars, but only because of what is inside of them. The package cannot improve your skin, no matter how decorative it is.

Walk over to your dressing table and see what you have on it. Then ask yourself just why. There should be nothing on it except what you need for your beauty care, and the number of articles should depend upon your particular type and condition of skin. Some women need only two or three jars, while others need a dozen. There is nothing quite so discouraging as to see a woman's dressing table crowded with three times as many jars and bottles as she needs. She may be doing her skin just as much harm by using the wrong things as she would if she did not use any at all. I know women who buy every beauty preparation they hear about simply because they want to be sure they do not miss anything. This type of woman buys by impulse instead of by logic. Her dressing table represents her temperament and not her judgment.

There are other women who are "penny wise and found foolish" about their good looks. They feel that everything they spend on themselves is selfishness. They would think nothing of an extra two or three dollars spent on food that is soon eaten, but they let the wrinkles come in their faces, simply because they think they cannot afford to guard against them. They are wrong, all wrong—the way to a man's heart is really much more through his eyes than through his stomach, and when you take care of your own good looks you are doing much more for your family than if you overfeed them. Most people eat too much anyway.

So you see, the problem is to strike a happy balance, get what beauty aids you need—no more and no less, and be sure you know what is inside of the bottles and jars that are lined up on your dressing table.

This week I am going to talk about the inside of the cosmetic jars. I shall take up the different kinds of beauty helps, and tell you just what each one does to your skin—soaps and soap substitutes, creams, astringents and refining lotions and the foundation preparations.

Tomorrow's subject will be "Soap and Soap Substitutes."

Diet and Health

Disordered Sleep in Childhood

Gritting Teeth

I'll take up gritting or grinding the teeth in children first, because I've had so many questions lately on that subject.

Let me say right away that this habit does not necessarily mean worms, as so many think. (Several of the mothers inquiring about the habit told me that they had administered worm medicine right away, with no results.)

Worms may cause gritting the teeth, because anything that causes restlessness at night may cause it. But a mother certainly should not give worm medicine, except under the supervision of a physician, who first would have the stools examined for evidence of the worms or their eggs.

If the child is well and gaining normally, this gritting of the teeth need not cause any alarm.

Head Rolling

In head rolling the movements are rhythmic and continue throughout the night, or part of the night. The rolling does not seem to disturb the child; in fact, sometimes it seems to enjoy the movements, and will try to get a position that is favorable to the habit. This, as in teeth gritting, may be due to factors which cause disturbed sleep, but even after the causes for the disturbance are remedied, the habit may persist, and more or less become automatic, the same as thumb sucking.

A child goes to bed feeling perfectly well, and falls asleep. In an hour or so he wakes up with a loud cry and sits up, showing that he is terrified; there is profuse sweating, especially of the forehead and hands, and trembling. The attack will last from a few minutes to an hour, and finally the child falls asleep and does not remember the occurrence in the morning.

The night terrors have more significance than the teeth grinding and head rolling, for perfectly healthy and normal children do not suffer with them. There is always something wrong with the health of the child. They are a result of a terrifying dream or nightmare, and this, in turn, is usually due to some organic trouble. Adenoids and enlarged tonsils, for instance, may interfere with the breathing and cause the sensation of suffocation and the dream of suffocation. Other things, such as gastric

MENU HINT

Why not have buffet supper when next you give an evening entertainment? Arrange the various dishes on the dining table so that it will be easy for the guests to help themselves—first the napkins, then silver, plates, then the dishes of food. Coffee may be served at the same table or a different table. Someone should be delegated to pass fresh installments of food and to refill the coffee cups. Following are two menus which you may find useful in planning the refreshments.

- Chicken a la King Potato Chips
- Olives Pickles
- Grapefruit Salad Rools
- Mince Tarts Cheese Coffee
- Cold Ham Scalloped Potatoes
- Scalloped Oyster or Pickles
- Cabbage Salad Currant Jelly
- Burnt Almond Cake Russian Chocolate or Coffee

TODAY'S RECIPES

Burnt Almond Frosting—Half cup butter, one and a half cups confectioner's sugar, two egg yolks, half cup almonds. Cream the butter, add the sugar and the egg yolks. Spread on the cake when ready to use. Branch the almonds, bake in a moderate oven until light brown. Cut in pieces and sprinkle on the frosting.

Russian Chocolate—Combine equal parts of hot coffee and hot chocolate and serve with whipped cream which has been slightly flavored with cinnamon.

SUGGESTIONS

Lacquering Flower Pots—An easy way of keeping flower pots in good condition is to lacquer them with red or green lacquer and then tie on a ribbon of a different or same color.

troubles, anemia, abnormally unstable or irritable nervous system, are to be thought of.

Night Walking (Somnambulism)—Night walking may be a result of night terrors. While the child is unconscious, with the eyes open and fixed, he acts out his dream. Sometimes he will do things in his night walking that he is forbidden to do in the daytime, thus confirming what some observers believe—that some dreams represent the fulfillment of wishes. Tice, for instance, tells of a boy who had been forbidden to slide down a 15-foot pole which was near the porch. In his night walking stunt, he got out on the porch roof and took a little slide down the pole.

In all these cases of disturbed sleep, all factors which cause it must be investigated. Is the child's general condition good? Is he cold, or too warm, is the air in the room good, is the diet correct, has he heard any gruesome stories or had any exciting play before going to bed—are all to be considered.

In the night walking, it is a wise idea to pin the child in some way, so that when he tries to rise, he awakens.

Tomorrow: A Letter.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Gen. H. F. Rethers, of the quarter-master's corps, of the army's marketing.

He sets a swell table for Uncle Sam's soldiers for 50 cents apiece—not per meal but per person. There's no doubt about its quality. Our enlisted men are envied, the world over, as the best-fed troops on earth.

A civilian can't keep the inside of his ribs padded with good food, these times, at an average of 16 2-3 cents a plate. He won't say enough, his wife will chuckle or it will cost him a good deal more.

Gen. Rethers could take a lot of credit to himself as a wonderful bargainer, if he chose. He doesn't choose. The average American housewife's as capable a buyer as he is, he says:

The beauty of it is, while he can provide bulk privates with dandy chow for half a dollar per capita daily, he admits he can't serve anything like such toothsome provender for anything like the same money in his own home.

He told me about a Washington restaurant where a pretty fair dinner's to be had for 65 cents, and remarked that he didn't see how it could be done.

The explanation?

The army buys at wholesale and its cooks have cut waste to an irreducible minimum.

So does the restaurant man buy at wholesale and he doesn't waste much, but he has oodles of overhead—rent, chefs, waiters, cashiers, a list of items as long as his arm.

The military caterer has even his fuel handed to him.

Every mill of that 50 cents goes into food.

The housewife, if she's her own cook and waitress, eliminates the restaurant man's charges for help, and maybe she doesn't take rent for her kitchen or the cost of gas for her stove into account, but she necessarily buys at retail.

Worse, she unavoidably wastes as neither the army nor the restaurant is compelled to do.

The culinary expert for a company of infantry, a troop of cavalry or a battery or artillery can submit a side of beef to his clientele in so many forms that little remains but the utensils he used to broil, roast, fry, stew and simmer it in.

The restaurateur, with a little ingenuity in the chattering of dishes, may dispose of the cheaper cuts for as much as the fanciest ones bring him, under their own names.

What the housewife has left over is no good.

"We use the can opener too often, for economy's sake, in our homes," observed Gen. Rethers, "but that isn't the housewife's fault, or ours."

"It's the way we're compelled, in this generation, to live. 'I'm not an apartment dweller because I like it. I've no choice.'"

"Living, because I must, in an apartment, I live out of tin cans. What's left over after a can's been opened—and you can't always eat it all up, simply to save it—won't keep. It has to be thrown out."

"And then you have to open another can."

"So the 50 cents a day that it costs to feed a soldier amply," concluded the general, "is just about what it costs to feed any one of the rest of us—leaving out the overhead."

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

WHAT SHALL WE TALK ABOUT

All of us have been embarrassed at some time in our lives by not being able to think of things to say. At such times there seems nothing left in the universe to talk about. With young people it is particularly hard, as they are easily "fused," and apt to think they are ruined socially if they can't chatter like magpies.

One girl thinks her lack of easy talk is the cause of the cessation of a young man's attentions, and asks my advice.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I went with a boy for five or six months only on Sunday nights. He also took me to shows every now and then during the week. All at once he quit coming, then he called me up and started coming regularly Sunday nights, and then he quit coming all at all. I work in the office and talk to him every day."

"Please, Mrs. Lee, try to tell me what to do to make him come back. When we are together he hasn't much to say and I haven't either."

"Anxious."

It is just possible that he feels he is not entertaining you because he does not seem to have much to say. Does he like to read or has he any hobby that you could be interested in? Or have you a particular interest yourself that might prove a source of conversation? You have your work at the office to talk over, and there are always happenings of current interest that you could discuss. If you are interested in a number of things yourself you can usually talk about them.

In answer to "Honorable Brown Eyes," I would say that the boy who has stopped writing to you and is writing to the other girl has chosen her, so there is nothing more to say about it. I agree with your father and mother that a boy who drinks and swears is not a very desirable friend for a little girl of 13. And don't you think you would feel better satisfied about the boys for awhile and tried to study and read and grow up so that you would make the finest kind of a girl pal for a really fine boy in a few years? Think it over.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

INTO THE SUNLIGHT IN SPIRIT OF HIMSELF

Screech Owl sounded anything but cordial, but Peter did not intend to let a little thing like that stand in the way of his finding out what he wanted to know. Somehow, in spite of the terrible things that Blue Jay had said about the Owl, the boy did not feel in the least afraid of the fellow.

"Oh, you need not pretend that you do not know who is knocking at your door, Screech Owl," called Peter. "You were looking down at me only a moment or two ago, and you better not deny it, for I saw your eye peeping out of this hole as plain as plain could be."

I climbed up here just as fast as I could just on purpose so that you would not fall asleep before I reached you. And now that I am here, you might as well come on out and talk to me, for I shall not go away until you do. Anyhow, I believe that you would feel better if you didn't drowse so much. It is a perfect shame to nap away a day like this."

"If I hadn't known before who you were I should most certainly guess now," grumbled the Screech Owl. "Nobody but a human would ever dare to speak to me like that. Well, if I must talk to you, I must, so I might as well make the best of things, as you say. I should like to ask you, though, how you would like to be dragged out of bed like this by a perfect stranger. Here I am, however. Come now. What do you wish to know? Where have you taken yourself to, my fine young Two Legs? It seems to me that the least you could do after I have taken all the trouble to get up out of my nice warm bed is to stay around where I can see you."

"Stay around where you can see me. Well, I like that," exclaimed Peter in great surprise. "I am standing right here by the side of your doorstep. All that you have to do is to turn your eyes this way."

"That is just exactly the trouble!" complained Screech Owl crossly. "I can't turn my eyes. They are fixed firmly in their sockets and I can't roll them like other birds do. You have no idea how inconvenient it is. I have to twist my head around every time I want to see anything. Now, if I were standing in front of my door I could look at you without coming out into the sunlight. Since you are off at the side I shall have to stir myself. Dear! Dear! How that light does bother me!"

I HAVE TO TURN MY HEAD WAY ROUND EVERY TIME I WANT TO SEE ANYTHING.

Grumbling all the while, Screech Owl poked his tufted head out of the hollow in the tree and lazily pulled out his body after it. Staring blindly straight ahead with wide-open, yellow rimmed eyes, it seemed to Peter that even though the bird knew just where he was it was some time before he actually saw the boy.

"Shay! Shay!" hissed Screech Owl irritably. "As if it wasn't bad enough to be chased into the house by those hateful screeching Blue Jays now I have to be forced to lose more sleep and, what is worse, to sit out here in the blinding sunlight—which I simply detest—to answer a lot of fool questions."

"If you really wanted to visit me why didn't you come tonight? I could see you better then—now I can barely make out your form, you know, and besides I would have been in a much better humor, after a fine day's sleep. Why did you come to bother me, anyhow?"

Next—The Wise Old Owl.

KILLING OF CRIMINALS

The problem as to whether a person guilty of murder should be put to death for his crime is causing more and more discussion, many insisting that the state should not take human life. It is contended that one crime cannot be corrected by another one of the same kind.

The chief argument in support of the extreme penalty is that it is a deterrent to crime perhaps preventing other murders.

On the other hand, many convicts would just as soon die as to face a life in prison at hard labor. George Remus demanded either death or freedom, although this demand might have been made because of its dramatic effect rather than in real seriousness.

But after all, isn't a life at hard labor in prison with nothing to look forward to and nothing to think about but a hideous crime committed for which one is paying—isn't such a life an even greater punishment than quick and painless death?

If Hickman, for instance, has the mind of a man rather than the mind of an animal or a fiend, what could be greater punishment than a life in which he is haunted by the terrible memory of an innocent and beautiful little girl tortured and butchered.

It is not the nature of the punishment that serves as a deterrent to crime. It is the quickness and the sureness of it.

With the final decision as to the fate of a murderer always so far in the distant future killers hesitate but little. What is needed most is a quick and sure conviction for every criminal. Convictions would come quicker if the death penalty should be eliminated. In that case mistakes could be rectified if discovered later.

If a slayer is doomed to a life of mental torment, rather than to quick and easy death, there should be no possible hope of pardon.

NEW MARRIAGE STYLE FIZZLE

The apparent effort of Mr. and Mrs. Haldeman-Julius to set a new style in marriages by widely advertising the 1927 companionate model adopted by their daughter, seems to have fizzled. At least, so far, there has been no wild rush of love-sick maidens and admiring chicks to the marriage license bureau to try the scheme.

A few who feared there might be such a rush now find that most young people have more sense than was generally supposed. The majority of youths and maidens, when they dream of marriage, they dream of a match for "keeps."

And fond parents frown on any match making before the youth involved is financially able to set up a tent and a cook stove or some sort of a habitation.

The dream of a youth to provide a suitable home for the most beautiful girl in the world always has been and probably always will be in the greatest possible incentive to hard work and real thrift which make a real man out of a dream-eyed cake eater.

It will be a sad day when everything is all fixed so that a youth can step into a trial marriage any day and then step out again if everything is not as lovely as it might be.

This companionate scheme has provided a lot of publicity for Judge Ben Lindsey, its inventor, and Haldeman-Julius, who staged a demonstration of how it works, but the providing of publicity seems to be about the only thing for which it is much good.

Now and then a candidate bobs up who can only be described as his own favorite son.—Detroit News.

Miller, professor of sociology at Ohio State university, says the existence of nations is becoming less important in world society than the unification of groups that cross-sectionally the world. Organizations like the Rotary club and other associations which claim members from all the civilized nations are playing a great part in the preservation of world peace. Organizations of men and women which reach across national borders are the most important organizations on earth.

YOUR $220

Is your $220 in the savings bank? Equal distribution of the nation's $220. At the middle of this year 26 billion dollars was reported in savings accounts. If you do not make enough to enable you, with your best effort, to make even a small savings, you had better be looking for another job. If you make enough to enable you to make a saving but don't do it through lack of will power and judgment you had better have a serious look at yourself.

THE ONCE-OVER

Owners of chain stores and other concerns which see location at the best corners and depend on volume of sales have trained men to test locations by counting and studying the people who pass a given spot on a crowded street. These observers have to do more than count. They are supposed to know, in the study of a few moments, whether the passerby is the kind that eats lunch at a lunch counter or goes leisurely to the club. He is supposed to be able to tell whether or not prospective has money to spend and whether he is likely to spend. That takes trained observation and it's an interesting job.

BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The dining room of the Hotel Lafayette, at University place and Ninth street, is a true mecca for fat women. Every other patron of the place, the other night, seemed to me to have at least two chins and to beam rubicundly as living advertisements for the Lafayette. One especially buxom lady, in a petal pink chiffon frock whose original model probably had been designed for a lissome debutante, had her napkin boldly tucked high in her décolletage, and her dog collar of pearls quivered as she bent passionately over her hors d'oeuvres.

At the Lafayette you can get an appallingly large dinner for $2.00. Of course, the best choice of the menu is not included, but the quality of the food is excellent and the service is efficient. If you want something out of the ordinary, such as venison steak or quail, you must consult the à la carte side of the menu. It is a place, it would seem, looking over the personnel, that the type was dying out in downtown New York.

Judith Anderson is an actress who has surmounted obstacles in arriving at her present place on Broadway. She is certainly not beautiful, but to my way of thinking owns a voice which is monotonously unpleasant. Perhaps it is that in "Behold The Bridegroom," she is hopelessly miscast. Certainly she seemed to me to give the role little of the light and beauty that it required. She plays in the Kelly piece a sophisticated of twenty-seven, stricken love sick by one glance at a simple man. I was bored to the point of madness by the talkativeness of the play. It was a ponderous and a deadly disaster. It would seem looking over the personnel, that the type was dying out in downtown New York.

Henry Boynton tells me that it is an exceedingly easy matter to finance an aviation company nowadays. The other day, he says, a chap came into the office where he works who was representing a new concern that is being organized around one of the transatlantic flyers. He came to see about an instrument for an endurance flight. He said he had bought the site for a flying field and a plant for $900,000 and that raising the money had been extremely easy. Apparently all that was necessary is to get a man who is famous as a pilot in on the proposition and the money flows in.

FRENCH LEAVE

We were invited to the apartment of a French family for dinner, but on arriving there we found the family somewhat upset over the fact that their maid had suddenly, without warning, packed up her clothes that afternoon and set out for the land of whereabouts unknown.

I was at once fascinated. Here, I reflected, was a perfect example of French leave. All my life I had heard of people taking French leave, but now here was the real thing—French leave by a French maid in a French home right in France.

"Is it a common occurrence," I asked, "for French servants to take French leave?"

Though our host and hostess understood English, they looked blankly at one another.

"French leave," repeated the hostess. "What's that?"

"To go without saying goodbye," I explained. "Isn't that French leave?"

Then the face of our host showed that a great light had dawned.

"Oh," he said, turning to his wife, "he means English leave!"

Since then, I have hesitated to ask for French dressing in a restaurant, lest the waiter should misunderstand and think I'm trying to spoof him.

Another surprise in Paris is the calm demeanor of taxicab drivers when indignant. When one has been brought up to think of the French as highly excitable, it is a great mistake to find them so calm. The taxicab I was in narrowly escaped being hit by another taxi as we turned a corner.

I was on the point of calling the erring driver several names, but remembered that as he probably couldn't understand English, it would be better to let my driver insult him properly in French.

But all that the driver said was a French phrase which my interpreter said meant merely: "It is less," said it in a reproving tone such as a mother might use toward a child.

Surprising folks, these French, Parisian pedestrians, when they

They know that if they just go ahead, mind their own business, without any faltering or back-tracking, the taxicab drivers will navigate safely around them. And no one is ever hurt. It takes a high degree of courage to attempt this the first time. I can't think of a better example of acting on faith. Your experience tells you that you will be all right, and yet because somebody has assured you that it will all right you go ahead and try it.

In head rolling the movements are rhythmic and continue throughout the night, or part of the night.

Why not have buffet supper when next you give an evening entertainment? Arrange the various dishes on the dining table so that it will be easy for the guests to help themselves—first the napkins, then silver, plates, then the dishes of food. Coffee may be served at the same table or a different table. Someone should be delegated to pass fresh installments of food and to refill the coffee cups. Following are two menus which you may find useful in planning the refreshments.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Burnt Almond Frosting—Half cup butter, one and a half cups confectioner's sugar, two egg yolks, half cup almonds. Cream the butter, add the sugar and the egg yolks. Spread on the cake when ready to use. Brown the almonds, bake in a moderate oven until light brown. Cut in pieces and sprinkle on the frosting.

Russian Chocolate—Combine equal parts of hot coffee and hot chocolate and serve with whipped cream which has been slightly flavored with cinnamon.

SUGGESTIONS

Lacquered Flower Pots—An easy way of keeping flower pots in good condition is to lacquer them with red or green lacquer and then tie on a ribbon of a different or same color.

troubles, anemia, abnormally unstable or irritable nervous system, are to be thought of.

Night Walking (Somnambulism)—Night walking may be a result of night terrors. While the child is unconscious, with the eyes open and fixed, he acts out his dream. Sometimes he will do things in his night walking that he is forbidden to do in the daytime, thus confirming what some observers believe—that some dreams represent the fulfillment of wishes. Tice, for instance, tells of a boy who had been forbidden to slide down a 15-foot pole which was near the porch. In his night walking stunt he got out on the porch roof and took a little slide down the pole.

In all these cases of disturbed sleep, all factors which cause it should be investigated. Is the child's general condition good? Is he cold, or too warm, is the air in the room good, is the diet correct, has he heard any gruesome stories or had any exciting play before going to bed—are all to be considered.

In the night walking, it is a wise idea to pin the child in some way, so that when he tries to rise, he awakens.

Tomorrow: A Letter.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Gen. H. F. Rethers, of the quarter-master's corps, of the army's marketing.

He sets a swell table for Uncle Sam's soldiers for 50 cents apiece—per meal, but per day. There's no doubt about its quality. Our enlisted men are envied, the world over, as the best-fed troops on earth.

A civilian can't keep the inside of his ribs padded with good food, these times, at an average of 16 2-3 cents a plate. He won't get enough, it will be poor chuck, or it will cost him a good deal more.

Gen. Rethers could take a lot of credit to himself as a wonderful bargainer, if he chose. He doesn't choose. The average American housewife's as capable a bargainer as he is, says:

The beauty of it, while he can provide buck privates with dandy chow for half a dollar per capita daily, he admits he can't serve anything like such toothsome provender, for anything like the same money in his own home.

He told me about a Washington restaurant where a pretty fair dinner's to be had for 65 cents, and remarked that he didn't see how it could be done.

The explanation? The army buys at wholesale and its cooks have cut waste to an irreducible minimum.

So does the restaurant man buy at wholesale and he doesn't waste much, but he has oodles of overhead—rent, chefs, waiters, cashiers, a list of items as long as his arm.

The military caterer has even his fuel handed to him. Every mill of that 50 cents goes into food.

The housewife, if she's her own cook and waitress, eliminates the restaurant man's charges for help, and makes a darned good take care for her kitchen or the cost of gas for her stove into account, but she necessarily buys at retail.

Worse, she unavoidably wastes as neither the army nor the restaurant is compelled to do.

The culinary expert for a company of infantry, a troop of cavalry or a battery or artillery can submit a side of beef to his clientele in so many forms that little remains but the utensils he used to broil, roast, fry, stew and simmer it in.

The restaurant, with a little ingenuity in the churning of dishes, may dispose of the cheaper cuts for as much as the fanciest ones bring him, under their own names.

What the housewife has left over is no good.

"We use the can opener too often, for economy's sake, in our homes," observed Gen. Rethers, "but that isn't the housewife's fault, or ours."

It's the way we're compelled in this generation, to live.

"I'm not an apartment dweller because I like it. I've no choice."

"Living, because I must, in an apartment, I live out of tin cans. I've left over after a can's been opened—and you can't always eat it all up, simply to save it—won't keep. It has to be thrown out."

"And then you have to open another can."

"So the 50 cents a day that it costs to feed a soldier amply," concluded the general, "is just about what it costs to feed any one of the rest of us—leaving out the overhead."

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

WHAT SHALL WE TALK ABOUT

All of us have been embarrassed at some time in our lives by not being able to think of things to say. At such times there seems nothing left in the universe to talk about. With young people it is particularly hard, as they are easily "fused," and apt to think they are ruined socially if they can't chatter like magpies.

One girl thinks her lack of easy talk is the cause of the cessation of a young man's attentions, and asks my advice.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I went with a boy for five or six months only on Sunday nights. He also took me to shows every now and then during the week. All at once he quit coming, then he called me up and started coming regularly Sunday nights, and then quit coming all at once. I work in the same place and talk to him every day.

"Please, Mrs. Lee, try to tell me what to do to make him come back. When we are together he hasn't much to say and I haven't either."

"Anxious."

It is just possible that he feels he is not entertaining you because you do not seem to have much to say. Does he like to read or has he any hobby that you could be interested in? Or have you a particular interest yourself that might prove a source of conversation? You have your work at the office to talk over, and there are always happenings of current interest that you could discuss. If you are interested in a number of things yourself you can usually talk about them.

In answer to "Honorable Brown Eyes," I would say that the boy who has stopped writing to you and is writing to the other girl has chosen her, so there is nothing more to say about it. I agree with your father and mother that a boy who drinks and swears is not a very desirable friend for a little girl of 13. And don't you think you would be better satisfied with yourself if you are a number of things yourself you can usually talk about them.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

INTO THE SUNLIGHT IN SPIRIT OF HIMSELF

Screech Owl sounded anything but cordial, but Peter did not intend to let a little thing like that stand in the way of his finding out what he wanted to know. Somehow, in spite of the terrible things that Blue Jay had said about the Owl, he did not feel in the least afraid of the fellow.

"Oh, you need not pretend that you do not know who is knocking at your door, Screech Owl," called Peter. "You were looking down at me only a moment or two ago, and your eye was shining out of that hole as plain as plain could be."

I climbed up here just as fast as I could just on purpose so that you would not fall asleep before I reached you. And now that I am here you might as well come on out and talk to me, for I shall not go away until you do. Anyway, I believe that you would feel better if you didn't drowse so much. It is a perfect shame to nap away a day like this."

"If I hadn't known before who you were I should most certainly guess now," grumbled the Screech Owl. "Nobody but a human would ever dare to speak to me like that. Well, if I must talk to you, I must, so I might as well make the best of things, as you say."

I should like to ask you, though, how you would like to be dragged out of bed like this by a perfect stranger. Here I am, however. Come now. What do you wish to know? Where have you taken yourself to, my fine young Two Legs? It seems to me that the least you could do after I have taken all the trouble to get up out of my nice warm bed is to stay around where I can see you."

"Stay around where you can see me," Well, I like that," exclaimed Peter in great surprise. "I am standing right here by the side of your doorstep. All that you have to do is to turn your eyes this way."

That is just exactly the trouble," complained Screech Owl crossly. "I can't turn my eyes. They are fixed firmly in their sockets and I can't roll them like other birds do. You have no idea how inconvenient it is. I have to twist my head around every time I want to see anything. Now, if I were standing in front of my door I could look at you without coming out into the sunlight. Since you are off at the side I shall have to stir myself. Dear! Dear! How that light does bother me!"

I HAVE TO TURN MY HEAD WAY AROUND EVERY TIME I WANT TO SEE ANYTHING.

Grumbling all the while, Screech Owl poked his tufted head out of the hole in the tree and lazily pulled out his body after it. Staring blindly straight ahead with wide-open, yellow rimmed eyes, it seemed to Peter that even though the bird knew just where he was, it was some time before he actually saw the boy.

"Shay! Shay!" hissed Screech Owl irritably. "As if it wasn't bad enough to be chased into the house by those hateful screaming Blue Jays now I have to be forced to lose more sleep and, what is worse, to sit up in the blind sunlight—which I simply detest—to answer a lot of fool questions."

"If you really wanted to visit me why didn't you come tonight? I could've shown you better than—now I can barely make out your form, you know, and besides I would have been in a much better humor, after a fine day's sleep. Why did you come to bother me, anyhow?"

Next—The Wise Old Owl.

CENTRAL HIGH TOSSERS WILL PLAY "BABY FLYERS" SATURDAY

Off to a brisk start in their inaugural game in the Miami Valley League of High School Athletics with Greenville last week, Central High School tossers of the art of basketball will have the University of Dayton Preps as their next obstacle on the schedule Saturday night at Dayton.

The "Baby Flyers" have been Xenia's "jinx" for several years. On no fewer than two straight years have the Preps eliminated the Blue and White clad athletes in the first round of the district court tournament at Dayton.

Xenia has yet to record a victory over the Preps in any line of athletic endeavor. Dayton has defeated Xenia twice in basketball and succeeded in battling Coach Kolb's football eleven to a scoreless tie on a snow-covered gridiron last season.

Xenia's surprising 53 to 18 defeat of Greenville meant much more than mere win in the local's first league game. It was Central's first victory of the season. With the losing streak at an end, high hopes are held of breaking the Prep hoodoo.

Coach Kolb has been putting his proteges through their paces this week and the shooting accuracy demonstrated in the Greenville game is still present in practice sessions. It is expected that the University of Dayton will play Bluffton College following the Central-Preps contest Saturday, furnishing Xenia fans with a large evening of basketball.

Despite Xenia's record of four defeats in five starts this season, opponents of the Blue and White have been outscored 117 to 107.

Seven cases of scarlet fever are under the surveillance of Dr. A. D. DeHaven, city health commissioner. Two homes have been quarantined, those of Mrs. Audrey Diamond and Herman White, both on High St.

Four of Mrs. Diamond's children are ill with the disease and a child of Mr. and Mrs. White is the other victim. Another child in the White family has recovered from the disease. All of the cases are of a mild nature, Dr. DeHaven says. No other cases of communicable diseases have been reported to Dr. DeHaven.

PANAMA, Jan. 10.—Although the last of the Central American Republics to be visited by America's world-famous flying ambassador, Panama today prepared to show Col. Charles A. Lindbergh that it would rank among the first as far as showering honor on him is concerned.

ATLANTIC CITY, Jan. 10.—The Democratic national committee may openly offer today to bring the next Democratic national convention to Atlantic City, according to Mayor Anthony M. Ruffo, Jr.

Mayor Ruffo announced last night that members of the committee had "definitely offered" to bring the convention here provided the city will have completed its $10,000,000 convention hall by July 1. The hall will be the largest in the world.

Since the convention hall will not be completed before 1929, Mayor Ruffo says he will offer to have the famous Million Dollar Pier here enlarged for the convention as a substitute. When alterations are completed, the hall on the pier will be 600 feet long and will cover two city blocks.

EVILS OF JURY SYSTEM TOLD BY MEMBER OF CINCINNATI BAR

By WALTER A. RYAN
Pres. Cincinnati Bar Association
(Editor's Note: George Remus, notorious Cincinnati bootlegger, killed his wife and was found "not guilty on the sole grounds of insanity" by the jury which tried him for murder. Much criticism has since been directed at this jury in particular and the American jury system in general. International News Service asked Walter Ryan, president of the Cincinnati Bar Association, what changes, in his opinion, are needed, and the following article is his answer).

In my opinion, there are three underlying causes contributing to the failure of conviction of the proper degree of crime by our modern jury.
First—A failure of our good, capable citizenry to realize their responsibility to serve when summoned as jurors.
Second—The failure of present methods for providing the jury list, and Third—The unfair and illogical distribution of preemptory challenges between the accused and the state in capital cases.

You will never have intelligent and competent juries as long as the better class in any community persist in begging releases from jury service. Examined under oath, it is not uncommon for jury to deliberately commit perjury to be relieved. And when there has been an apparent miscarriage of justice through the verdict of a mediocre jury, the persons making the greatest outcry of indignation are those who have persisted in shirking the burdens of jury service.

Some courts have been too easy in accepting excuses, but the alarming increase of crime throughout our land has aroused the judges to a realization of the necessity for obtaining better juries.

And the public should rally to their support by accepting such service.

The methods for preparing the list of names available for jury service differs with each community, but unfortunately, owing in a large measure to the persistent dodging of jury service by good citizens, there has grown up a class of what might be styled professional jury men and women. They are found loitering in all court houses, and manage to get their names put on the list. The frequency with which they are seen in the jury box from term to term, their names supposedly having been drawn from the wheel, leads one to wonder if the law of averages as well as the law of the land, has not also taken a vacation.

The courts must undertake reform in this department and devise some system of selection, by which jury service shall seek the citizen and not the citizen jury service.

In Ohio in the trial of crimes involving capital punishment, the provision limiting the state to four preemptory challenges of jurors, while giving the accused sixteen, is a serious handicap to the prosecution in an effort to secure a satisfactory jury. Many persons possessing the lowest degree of intelligence are allowed to remain in the box, who cannot be reached for cause, but who would be dismissed if the state was not confined to four preemptory challenges.

Prior to the enactment in 1858 of the present statute on this subject, the accused had twenty-three preemptory challenges, and the state had none. It was recognized then that the accused had too great an advantage, and the four and sixteen law was passed. But if those days convictions were the rule and acquittals the exception, so there may have been some wisdom in the statute; but today, with capital crimes of almost daily occurrence, and the spectacle of many escaping punishment, either totally or partially, the reason for giving this undue advantage to the accused has outlived its usefulness and has become a menace.

MARTINEZ, Cal.—A. G. Graine, of this city, inserted the following advertisement: "For Sale—One white elephant. Crawls, walks and runs (some time); new paint (six years ago); brand new tires (about 1,500 miles ago). I have been trying to run it fourteen months and I sell it in thirteen months, but admit I am ticked. Anybody can wrestle with the animal from now until eternity by simply bringing me $2000 My sympathy and blessings free. A real fine bargain for someone in the second childhood."

"I Could Cry Over My Skin"

No Need to Say that Now.

If you have tried "everything" for your pimples, blackheads or eczema and want to know what it is to get something that really works—then let your skin know the magic touch of sulphur combined with menthol. Nothing more amazing than how sulphur clears the skin, and as sulphur clears, menthol heals. As combined in Rowles Mentho Sulphur, the two make an astonishing skin corrective and builder. Pimples dry up overnight. Blackheads and coarse pores vanish in a few days. And as for eczema—even the most burning or itching case soon yields. Relief from the burning or itching follows immediately upon application.

Rowles Mentho Sulphur is inexpensive and all druggists supply it in jars ready to use. Be sure it's Rowles.

NAGLEY AGAIN HEADS SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE; HEAR SPEECH

J. Harry Nagley was re-elected president of the Social Service League for 1928, at the annual banquet and business meeting at the First U. P. Church, Monday night. F. C. Clemmer was elected treasurer; Mrs. James Wilson III, secretary and Miss May Orr, assistant secretary.

E. H. Heathman will be chairman of the annual drive for funds which will be held soon. Mr. Heathman will organize the drive committee.

The history of the care of orphans from the time Ohio was a territory until the present, explaining the wonderful progress from the time when children were "bound out" until now, was the subject of Miss Belle Greve, Columbus, superintendent, Division of Charities, State Welfare Department.

Covers for 185 people were laid at the banquet, and women of the church served a delicious menu. Miss Greve made a brief "selling talk" at the table, on her work in Armenia during the World War. She had charge of an orphanage of 3,700 children, with 125 assistants, and superintended shoe shops, the repair of old clothing and other materials sent by Xenians and others to the Armenians.

After the banquet, the meeting was adjourned to the church auditorium where Miss Greve gave a most interesting and enlightening address.

Children's Homes are only "receiving stations" where the child is studied and placed in a foster home to which he seems adapted and supervision can be continued over the child in this home to see that he is properly adjusted and cared for, she explained.

Miss Greve also explained at length the humanitarian work of the juvenile court in seeking to rehabilitate and readjust homes about to "break"—to get the parents to realize their responsibility of keeping the natural home for their children. She said that 90 per cent of the children in orphanages have one or both parents living, yet these homes have become "broken homes." She pointed out that the large amount of money necessary to be expended by counties in home supervision paid in the end in keeping children out of corrective institutions.

A short business meeting was held at the close of the address, when officers were elected.

"The League wishes to take this opportunity to thank all who so generously contributed to the support of the League during the past year," Mrs. George C. Stokes, executive secretary, said Tuesday. "Those who gave money, material or time. Especially do we thank Dr. H. C. Messenger and the staff of men and women who assisted him in providing the free baby clinics, the Kiwanis Club for its financial aid, which will have untold influence on future health conditions in Xenia. We also wish to thank Mrs. George Henkle and her assistants for conducting the Christmas Carol program."

INCREASE SALARY OF HOME OFFICIALS

Salary increases have been voted by County Commissioners for Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Kildow, superintendent and matron, respectively, of the Greene County Infirmary.

The superintendent's salary has been boosted from $70 to $80 per month and that of the matron from $50 to $60 per month, effective as of January 1.

FINED ON CHARGE

George Filkins was fined $25 and costs on a charge of intoxication by Probate Judge S. C. Wright, Monday. He pleaded guilty.

Filkins was arrested and brought to Xenia by J. E. Hume, marshal of Fairfield, and was ordered remanded to the County Jail for non-payment of the fine and costs.

NOTICE

This is to notify the citizens of Xenia that the only authorized Hoover Sweeper service man for this city is Mr. Fay Funderburg. If your Hoover needs service call him at his home or at Galloway and Cherry's.

TWENTY SCHOOLS IN OHIO WANT TO JOIN DEBATING LEAGUE

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 10.—Twenty schools have applied for membership in the Ohio High School Debating League which is being sponsored by the department of public speaking at Ohio State University.

The league was organized to promote effective public speaking and the use of good English and to stimulate public discussion of state and national questions. Debates between the various schools will be staged this winter and the finals will be held in Columbus next spring. The elimination plan will be used.

In order to interest more schools in the project final date for applying for membership has been extended until Jan. 10, other debating leagues of the state have been invited to join the state league. According to James Glenn Ross, of the public speaking department at Ohio State University, who is in charge of the formation of the league, nearly all of the schools entered so far are from smaller towns and villages of the state. Only a few large city schools are entered.

The schools already members of the league are: Ravenna; Greenville; Troy; Oberlin; Middletown; Chaney High School, Youngstown; Hubbard; Central High School, Lima; East High School, Youngstown; McKimley High School, Canton; Hamilton; Central High School, Findlay; Bedford; Urbana; Howland High School, Warren; Mansfield; South High School, Youngstown; Portsmouth; Albany; and Marion High School.

MAYOR'S COURT

ACCIDENT RECALLED
Cecil Gardinios, 22, colored, Yel. low Springs St., Springfield, O., pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving before Mayor John W. Prugh Monday.

He was required to pay costs of $10 and make restitution of $15 for damage caused by his automobile in a collision with a car driven by Miss Louise Parrett, this city, November 24, 1927.

Arrested by Springfield police and returned to Xenia Monday by Peter Shagie, motorcycle policeman, Gardinios denied knowledge of the accident, but admitted ownership of the auto which caused the collision.

He declared that he was sick at the time and that to the best of his knowledge his auto was in the garage on the date of the accident.

FOILED AGAIN

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Miss Mercedes Gleitze, young London stenographer and English Channel swimmer today had to abandon her second attempt to swim the Straits of Gibraltar, said a Central News dispatch from Tangier this afternoon. She had been in the water some time when she had to quit.

AGAIN ELECTED

H. W. EAVEY

Herman W. Eavey was re-elected president of the Greene County Board of Commissioners at the annual re-organization meeting for 1928 Monday. The election is for a term of one year.

Owing to the illness of Commissioner A. E. Beam, the organization meeting was deferred from earlier in the year until the later date.

FORCED DOWN

MADRID, Jan. 10.—The Spanish aviators Jimenez and Iglesias, who hopped off from Seville on Sunday on a flight to Cape Juby, Africa, have been forced down at Saffi, French Africa, an official communique said today.

Lack of fuel caused their descent, the statement said.

Pimples, Boils, Skin Eruptions

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils and other skin eruptions as being an indication of an abnormal condition of the system. This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of these unsightly blemishes and painful annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S.

"I suffered from impure blood—was weak, and I had lost so much weight, I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils and kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S. which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It clears up the skin; makes you strong and fit; you with energy."

Mrs. J. W. Baker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

You owe it to yourself to try S.S.S. It helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished. It is time-tried and reliable.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

MISS MARTHA WOLF SUCCUMBS MONDAY

Miss Martha Wolf, 82, last member of the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wolf, well known residents of Byron vicinity, died at the home of Mrs. A. W. Eichelberger, Dayton, Monday after a week's illness.

Miss Wolf was an aunt of Roy Wolf, this city. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at the Byron Church with burial in Byron Cemetery.

BELLBROOK

Rolean Gibson, who has been on the sick list for a number of days, is reported improved.

Bellbrook's second basketball team was decisively defeated by Springfield Valley's second team on Saturday night.

Mr. Taylor, of Wilmington, was in town Saturday looking after his insurance holders.

The Willing Workers Sunday School Class held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Gertrude Hess on Saturday night.

Bellbrook High School basketball team defeated Beaver High on last Friday night by a score of 28 to 5.

Harold Sidenstricker, of Dayton, spent Sunday with friends in the village.

The present sexton of the home cemetery is the only one who ever held the position, who is known to have watered the flowers in January.

W. C. A. held its annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Lizzie Myers on last Friday afternoon. The election of officers for the ensuing year preceded a delicious lunch served to the twenty in attendance by Mrs. Myers. Officers elected as follows: President, Mrs. Stella Muthup; vice-president, Mrs. C. C. Austin; secretary, Easton Rhonemus. The next meeting will be held on the first Friday afternoon in February.

WHAT IS YOUR NOSE WORTH?

One of the most famous facial surgeons in America said recently that were he asked for expert testimony in a case of damages he would say the disfigurement of the nose was more serious than any other feature of the face.

"Certainly, you could not say, doctor, that it is more dreadful to lose a part of your nose than your eyesight?"

"I think so," he answered. "Of course, when one is blinded, the whole world is blotted out, but sometimes it is just as well that one does not see the plying glances that are given one."

"A few years ago a young woman in Chicago received from the traction company $25,000 for having her pretty Grecian nose flattened until it could be no longer beautiful. Immediately after receiving her compensation I was called in and put the nose back into proper shape. An instrument was inserted in the nostril and the crushed bones were put back into place. An adhesive plaster was placed cross-fashion over the entire nose, serving as a pad, and soon after the young woman, plus a perfect nose, and $25,000, became the bride of a fine young man."

In this day and age it is foolish for one to have any disfigurement on one's face, especially with one's nose, for while a perfect nose is exceedingly rare, that part of the face is always associated with character apart from intellectual qualities.

Great novelists who are always close observers of facial characteristics have described different kinds of noses very often in their portraits. Dickens in "Little Dorrit" makes Blandois exhibit a nose coming down as the lip goes up, in dent in sculpture, and as at that time there were no facial surgeons the greatest sculptor of his time had to wear a flat nose all his life.

NAGLEY AGAIN HEADS SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE; HEAR SPEECH

J. Harry Nagley was re-elected president of the Social Service League for 1928, at the annual banquet and business meeting at the First U. P. Church, Monday night. F. C. Clemmer was elected treasurer; Mrs. James Wilson III, secretary and Miss May Orr, assistant secretary.

E. H. Heathman will be chairman of the annual drive for funds which will be held soon. Mr. Heathman will organize the drive committee.

The history of the care of orphans from the time Ohio was a territory until the present, explaining the wonderful progress from the time when children were "bound out" until now, was the subject of Miss Belle Greve, Columbus, superintendent, Division of Charities, State Welfare Department.

Covers for 185 people were laid at the banquet, and women of the church served a delicious menu. Miss Greve made a brief "selling talk" at the table, on her work in Armenia during the World War. She had charge of an orphanage of 3,700 children, with 125 assistants, and superintended shoe shops, the repair of old clothing and other materials sent by Xenians and others to the Armenians.

After the banquet, the meeting was adjourned to the church auditorium where Miss Greve gave a most interesting and enlightening address.

Children's Homes are only "receiving stations" where the child is studied in a foster home to which he seems adapted and supervision can be continued over the child in this home to see that he is properly adjusted and cared for, she explained.

Miss Greve also explained at length the humanitarian work of the juvenile court in seeking to rehabilitate and readjust homes about to "break"—to get the parents to realize their responsibility of keeping the natural home for their children. She said that 90 per cent of the children in orphanages have one or both parents living, yet these homes have become "broken homes." She pointed out that the large amount of money

B. Harrison, who had been associated with Mr. Steele and R. A. Kelly, an experienced cordage manufacturer, Mr. Harrison became president, Mr. Harrison, vice president, Mr. Steele, secretary and Mr. Kelly, superintendent. John Little, father of George Little, was a director. Upon the death of Mr. Harrison in 1903, Mr. Steele succeeded to the entire management and upon the death of Mr. Harrison in 1913, he succeeded to the presidency and continued as general manager. A. S. Fraser, Xenia banker, became vice president after Mr. Harrison's death and was succeeded upon his death in 1920 by the late J. D. Steele, Jr., son of the president. Upon the latter's death in 1922, George Little became vice president, W. Crawford Craig, auditor, is secretary and treasurer of the company, succeeding to that position after the death two years ago of W. C. Halliey.

HAVE FIVE MILLS

The original mill was on W. Second St., in the plant now occupied by the Xenia stemmy of the American Tobacco Co. Later the company transferred its operations to Cincinnati Ave., where it operates three mills, known as the New Mill, the Ohio Mill and the Xenia Mill. In 1915 a mill was erected at North Kansas City, Mo., and later the company acquired another branch mill at Covington, Ky., all of which are in operation.

The company is one of the largest manufacturers of its kind because it produces binder twine, rope, hemp and jute commercial twines and packing and oakum. Few other companies make more than one or two types of cordage. At one time the Xenia company operated a cotton twine mill and later abandoned this branch. The company maintains its general offices in Xenia, principal offices being in the Steele Bldg., at Main and Detroit Sts., but has branch offices at its factories and branch sales offices in Minneapolis, Minn., Omaha, Neb., Kansas City, Atlanta, Ga. The company manufactures everything from binder twine and commercial twines and clothes lines, to the largest ropes made and deals largely through jobbers and paper concerns. It features a "Manila rope" under the trade mark of "Blue Heart," so named from a blue cord running through its center and a special brand of binder twine known as "Star Brand." Since the binder twine business is seasonal, it keeps its mills running full-time all year by changing the product to suit the demand. Its raw materials of jute, hemp, sisal and other cordage making material, come from all over the globe, especially the tropical sections.

CHRIST CHURCH TO SELECT OFFICERS

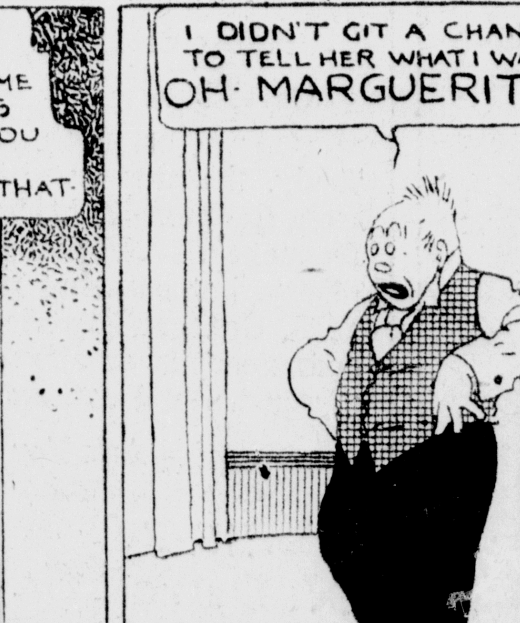

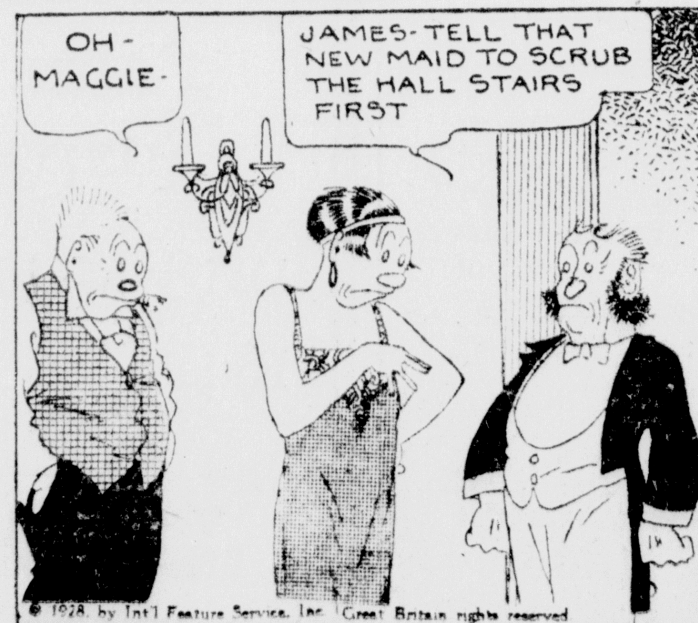

Annual business meeting of Christ Episcopal Church will be held Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock in the church Parish House, it is announced.

Elections of wardens and vestry will be held. Delegates will also be chosen for the convention of the diocese, which will take place at Christ Church, Dayton, January 31 and February 1.

Under a new ruling passed last year, women members of the congregation are now eligible to election to the vestry and as convention delegates.

Reports from the treasurers and other officers of the various organizations of the parish, giving a resume of the work accomplished during the last year, will be heard at the meeting. The outlook for the coming year will also be touched upon.

BRINGING UP FATHER

FAIRFIELD IS SUED FOR $1,500; THREE COUPLES DIVORCED

The village of Fairfield is named defendant in a suit asking $1,500 damages, filed in Common Pleas Court by Edward M. DeHaven and Susan M. DeHaven.

Plaintiffs declare they own two lots on Ohio Ave. in Fairfield, having a frontage of 100 feet, located in an addition made to the village in 1924.

They erected, at great cost, a residence and other buildings and planted fruit and ornamental trees and shrubbery, the petition adds.

Prior to this time, the avenue had been graded and improved and plaintiffs built with reference to the then existing level and grade of the avenue, the petition continues.

Later the same year the village ordered the plaintiffs to erect a sidewalk in front of their property and created a grade for the sidewalk in accordance with the avenue grade as it then existed, it is set forth.

Plaintiffs charged that in September, 1927, the village adopted a grade for the avenue from one to two feet above the former grade, and in changing the grade is covering the larger part of the sidewalks with earth and gravel to a depth of from two to sixteen inches.

It is claimed that the change in grade causes surface water and mud from Ohio Ave. to flow across the sidewalks along plaintiff's property and upon and over the premises.

Alleging an improper grade has been adopted by the village, plaintiffs contend the value of their property has diminished and that the village proceeded to make the change in grade without first giving them their required notice.

Morris D. Rice is attorney for the plaintiffs.

The court also ordered the receiver to sell at private sale, personal goods and chattels listed in the inventory and appraisement, appraised at $278.81, for not less than the appraised value.

CASE DISMISSED

FAIRFIELD IS SUED FOR $1,500; THREE COUPLES DIVORCED

The village of Fairfield is named defendant in a suit asking $1,500 damages, filed in Common Pleas Court by Edward M. DeHaven and Susan M. DeHaven.

Plaintiffs declare they own two lots on Ohio Ave., in Fairfield, having a frontage of 100 feet, located in an addition made to the village in 1924.

They erected, at great cost, a residence and other buildings and planted fruit and ornamental trees and shrubbery, the petition adds.

Prior to this time, the avenue had been graded and improved and plaintiffs built with reference to the then existing level and grade of the avenue, the petition continues.

Later the same year the village ordered the plaintiffs to erect a sidewalk in front of their property and created a grade for the sidewalk in accordance with the avenue grade as it then existed, it is set forth.

Plaintiffs charged that in September, 1927, the village adopted a grade for the avenue from one to two feet above the former grade, and in changing the grade, is covering the larger part of the sidewalk with earth and gravel to a depth of from two to sixteen inches.

It is claimed that the change in grade caused surface water and mud from Ohio Ave. to flow across the sidewalks along plaintiff's property and upon and over the premises.

Alleging an improper grade has been adopted by the village, plaintiffs contend the value of their property has diminished and that the village proposed to make the change in grade without first giving them required notice.

Morris D. Rice is attorney for the plaintiffs.
